Accourage to the latest and most reliable advices we may expect the King on Monday. From a letter which he wrote to a friend here, he says that he plauted finally to Kentucky; he was to arrive at Omaha October 6th and reach San Frandate as far as Omaha. Our remarks of last week upon the matter of a Teachers' Convention, have called forth two replies already from our educators, replies which appear in another column. It is very evident that our teachers are quite alive upon the matter; it is a most important one; no body of men expect to make their work thorough and chensive without some organization. Considering the number of school teachers employed on these Islands, and considering further the large portion of our comall matters of education, we feel sure that, when the movement is once set well going, great results will follow. Our school work here has been carried on up to the present in too isolated a manner; a teacher, be he as excellent as he may be, requires to see semathing of his fellow-teachers, to understand the methods employed in various establishments and to learn comewhat of to be an excellent time for our teachers to come together. The objection made by Mr. Hitchcock on the score of expense might, we think be easily overcome; that is really a matter of detail. We know of two houses where the teachers from the other islands would be gladly welcomed as far as the holding expacities of the houses will reach, and we have little doubt that many more than those two houses would do their share towards giving house room to the representatives from the other is-lands. We would suggest that the gentlemen we mentioned last week should meet together, form a committee and get together the Honolulu teachers: a President now, but at any time it may become a very important matter certain Chinese may if any thing is wrong, let our authorities know about it, but we must remember that we are trusting to information which can only be given us as a favor by Chinese, who are speaking against the desires of their own race, instead of depending upon some one whose duty it is to let the authorities know everything that is going on.

spectacles: it drew comparisons with other laces upon this globe and it was satisfied the business prospects were considered excellent, and as for political clouds, they originated entirely in newspaper dis-cussion. Happy country! happy Hawaii said we. Then we looked at a fester signed "Observer," and we read of 'a vague feeding of unrest presaging to a certain degree the near approach of something like a crisis in national affairs;" of an anti-alien party, of "monopolies" which are likely to be a danger to the State; in fact, a very Cassandra of a communication. Alas, alas, wrotehed Hawaii | there appears a Alsa, alsa, wreebeed Hawani there appears to be no hope for you, if all thus is true.

Taking the two precess together, we can manage to strike a tolerable mire. We may all others say that all its not confirm to the first third and the same and the Albarana suggestics, everything is not so hopelworly bad as "Observer" points cet. We will great that there are many evils, but so there are in all countries, and as they come along they are not, fought and now and then killed; if not killed they are kept somewhat in check. The process of lighting some of these questions is now going on, and we may be pretty sure that in the long run the good cause will win. All that is needed is unity of action among the best minds in the community, both mative and foreignes, speaking of this matter the other day, a friend of ours remarked, "do you really believe that the native and foreignes who caree nothing for the Independence of the Islands, who are utterly hopeless about the native race; but you will find plenty who care very much for both who are about the native race; but you will find plenty who care very much for both who are about the native race; but you will find plenty who care very much for both who will maintain that bet of civilization while of the history of the world, and who will maintain that bet of civilization who will maintain that bet of civilization wheel for both who world, and who will maintain that bet of civilization wheel for both who were better will not be any great amount required.

The Leckmana is ready for sea, but Cansul Severance writes to say that she has received no orders as vet to put herself at the King's service. Come in what he may, we are quite sure the King will meet with a hearty welcome. Whatever men's shades of political opinion may be, they must feel that it is their dury as well as their pleagure to welcome back the beard of the State in a fitting manner. We can notice around our streets, now, a great deal of preparation, and we feel very certain that the reception will be hearty and loval. The King has been received with great honors in many countries of the globe, the semi-barbane and the most circulined have vied with one another in showing him great attentions; but after all there is "no place like home." And the burkarre splendors of the East and the cultivated polish of European society, will not have the same attraction to the King. and state on October 11th, the day after world, and who will maintain that bit of

The Government did what was right when it took the eattle off Nunanu Valley and allowed the trees and the grass to grow. Anyone who now visits the upper part of the Valley will at once recognize the improvement; will see the guava scrub coming up on lands that were bare of any bushes a year or so ago; will notice the spread of the hau, of the banana, and in fact of a number of our island trees and its effect in retaining the moisture in the valley uplands, and a more steady supply of water down the Nunanu stream. We can thus see that some practical good has been gained by leiting Nature have her way for a short time; but far more practical good could be obtained if Nature had the assistance of Art; if, instead of de
